

LAST HOURS OF LIQUOR TRADE MADE STRENUOUS FOR POLICE

Vehicular Traffic Between Washington and Baltimore Shows Anxiety of Many to "Stock Up" Before Law Closes Saloons.

Steam and electric trains, automobiles and motor trucks last night were well patronized by dry residents of this city who went to Baltimore to participate in one more "joy party" with red liquor, straight or in numerous decoctions and steins of foaming beer as the chief attraction. It was reported that a number of "hoosers" with only small sums of money in their pockets were on the roads "bumming" rides from drivers of the motor trucks on the way to Baltimore.

So far as could be learned from the liquor dealers last night, there has been no concerted movement in Baltimore looking to continuing the liquor business after Monday night at 12 o'clock. It may be that one or more may decide to keep open in order to make a test of the market, but none of them seems willing to put himself in a position to be heavily fined and sent to prison. All are more than willing to pass the buck, and it is stated, it may still be passing when the midnight hour on the last day of June is tolled, announcing the official death of John Barleycorn.

Viewed as Joke in New York.

In New York, it is stated, application of war-time prohibition threats to become a joke. Presidential interference or not, it is stated, hundreds of dealers in the metropolis are determined to open their doors Tuesday morning and wet the "whistles" of the regulars who have been among the early morning callers with a "hang-over" from the night before. Hundreds of dealers there, however, although advised that there is nothing in the law to prevent the sale of 2.75 per cent beer, will not continue business for fear of prosecution and punishment. Others, it is stated, will sell 2 per cent beer. It is claimed that tests of dealers in New York products convinced those who conducted them that the beverages will not intoxicate.

William H. Hirst, counsel for the society, whose membership includes a majority of liquor sellers in New York city, advised the members against taking concerted action, as this might place the war in a position of assisting to oppose the government, although he said the war prohibition law was of no effect under present circumstances.

President's Power Questioned.

Representatives of some of the big liquor interests in New York city question the authority of the President to lift the ban only on light wine and beer, claiming he lacks power to establish, by proclamation, the light wine and beer policy which he recommended to Congress. If the President declares mobilization at an end, it is asserted, the war-time prohibition act is entirely wiped out and all classes of intoxicants may be made and sold as before the war.

Backset for Bootleggers.

It is predicted by the police that the closing of Baltimore liquor places will be the means of making it difficult for bootleggers to get supplies. They realize, however, that the latter, having become practically wealthy from the sale of bootleg whiskey, are not going to give up the business unless they are forced to do so. The police also know that there are many individual users who are willing to make desperate attempts to run the blockade with small supplies of intoxicants.

The superintendent of police, anticipating many such desperate efforts to run the blockade, will be made the last few days Baltimore remained wet, provided additional policemen for duty on the several roads which enter the District, and the extra details were on duty last night. It is likely they will remain on duty until the question of Baltimore becoming absolutely dry is determined.

Officers Head Squads.

Capt. James Hartley and Lieut. Yule Hodges of the ninth precinct; Capt. Thomas Judge and Lieut. Louis J. Stoll of the tenth precinct; and Lieut. James Giles of the Tenthelown district took personal charge of the squads in the ninth precinct, on guard at the District line and Bladensburg road, had their hands full, several hundred men being kept busy on their way to and from Baltimore.

The Washington-Baltimore boulevard was literally lined with cars long before sundown, man and woman occupants going in the direction of Baltimore and the intervening roadhouses to bring home a few bottles of the ardent fluid. It was physically impossible for the police to stop all automobiles on the return trips and give them a "once over," because such action would interrupt traffic during the entire night and part of today.

Three Captives Brought In.

In addition to the men on duty on the country roads, Maj. Pullman had watch kept at Union station and persons returning from Baltimore on the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis electric line were under surveillance. The result was that early in the afternoon Detective Delamater and Police- man Junghans met Thomas Cobbs, colored, 2212 Pomeroy court, on his return from Baltimore on the electric road. Cobbs, they reported, had four full quarts of liquor and a pint bottle that contained several drinks. He was told he should have known better, was arrested and locked up.

A few minutes later Sam Tucker, colored, 525 Orchard street, arrived with the same quart and a bottle of quantity did not figure in the case except so far as it related to the question of collateral, but Sam did not have money enough for that purpose, and it was a call for him.

Charged with violation of the Reed bone-dry law, John Thomas Smith, colored, 91 Myrtle street, was arrested last night by the Tenthelown police. He is said to have had in his car ten cases of whiskey, fifty bottles of beer and one quart of wine. His two companions fled on the approach of the policeman. He gave bond and was allowed to go to his home.

Dentistry School Discontinued.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 28.—Vanderbilt University announced today that its school of dentistry has been discontinued.

JOHN L. WEAVER HEADS REAL ESTATE BOARDS

JOHN L. WEAVER.

John L. Weaver of this city was elected president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the closing session of the annual convention yesterday afternoon at Atlantic City.

Mr. Weaver, who was vice president of the association, was unanimously elected to the office. He had also been a member of the executive committee of the association since its formation. With the election of the local member of the association to the office of president it is the first time a local man has held the office.

Mr. Weaver is highly regarded in real estate and other business circles here, as well as among the members of the national association. During the war he served as fuel administrator for the District of Columbia. He is a member of the real estate firm of Weaver Brothers.

NEED TECHNICAL MEN.

National Marine League Says Chances Open in Shipping Trades.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Of the thousands of college undergraduates seeking summer jobs there are not enough technical men to supply the needs of the ship, shipping and foreign commerce trades in the United States, it is stated by the National Marine League's Department of Maritime Personnel, which has recently placed hundreds of young men on ships, in dry docks, export and import houses and various allied businesses for the summer vacation.

The positions available range from special summer vacation apprenticeships on government vessels, under a plan drawn by the league and officially adopted by the United States Shipping Board, to factory administration jobs in large manufacturing export houses.

In every case the work is especially designed by the employer to give the man a perspective of the business with a view to making him valuable for the future, rather than to use him merely as an ordinary seasonal worker. Salaries vary widely with the nature of the employment. Positions have been filled in many different parts of the country east of the Mississippi. The service to both employers and applicants is maintained gratis, and the league not only arouse public interest in maritime affairs, but to furnish an adequate supply of highly trained men to marine and allied industries in anticipation of the country's enormous commercial expansion.

POLICE AND CORONER BUSY IN PAST YEAR

Homicidal Deaths, 37; Traffic Fatalities, 60; Suicides, 60—Three Deaths Remain Mysteries.

Maj. Raymond W. Pullman, superintendent of police, and Dr. J. Ramsey Nevitt, coroner, have begun work on the reports of their respective departments for the fiscal year, which comes to a close at midnight tomorrow. The year has been one of the busiest ones for both departments in the history of the city, the number of violent deaths exceeding those of past years, it is stated.

Sixty Traffic Fatalities.

Thirty-seven cases of homicide, irrespective of deaths from traffic accidents in which drivers of automobiles were held for manslaughter, are recorded. More than sixty deaths resulted from traffic accidents, deaths from accidents of various kinds aggregating considerably more than 200, and the suicide record contains more than sixty names.

Only three of the thirty-seven homicides remain mysteries, and it is recalled that in a number of instances the finding of decomposed bodies with scarcely the slightest clue upon which the police could make a start presented what appeared to be mysteries that would remain unsolved. Inspector Grant's force succeeded in solving them, however.

Probably the most interesting case during the year was that of the slaying of Dr. Theodore Wong, head of the Chinese educational mission, and his secretary and treasurer. That case remained a mystery for several days, but one confessed Chinese participant and his brother finally were landed behind the bars. Another mystery the detectives solved involved the slaying of Richard H. Duvall, employed at Trinity College, by an older employee.

Three Deaths Mysteries.

The three unsolved mysteries involve the deaths of John D. Walke, Alexander Warren and Nellie Gatewood. Walke, employed as watchman on a government building near 17th and P streets, was beaten to death with a club and his body left at his place of employment. Warren, colored, a photographer, was beaten to death, robbed and his body taken to a lonely spot beyond Glenwood cemetery and partly cremated. Nellie Gatewood, colored, was stabbed to death in an alley near her home.

RECALLS PILGRIM LANDING.

Rules Committee of House Takes Step for Anniversary Event.

Appointment of two senators and four representatives as a special congressional committee to confer with Massachusetts state officials in planning for the observance of the 30th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth was recommended yesterday by the House rules committee on a resolution by Representative Walsh of Massachusetts.

The committee would be directed to recommend legislation necessary for "participation by the government of the United States in the celebration of this historic event."

Money Is Human Effort

A large proportion of human effort is given in the pursuit of money.

To save a dollar is to turn one's labor into a permanent asset. Then the dollar continues to yield, even until it doubles itself, and more.

Thus do success-builders make their labor pay continuously, while the spender pays but once. You should have a savings account at this bank and crystallize some of your effort into permanent form.

STAY IN TOWN ON THE FOURTH OF JULY

On That Day There Will Be Staged In Washington a Spectacle Equal To or Greater Than the Mardi Gras

International in scope, it will symbolize the return of the world to lasting peace and the responsibilities attached to that accomplishment.

All foreign countries represented in Washington will participate, and have contributed large sums of money to defray the expenses.

The greatest event in the history of the world will be celebrated by the greatest exhibition of pageantry ever witnessed.

At 10 o'clock in the morning several thousand District boys, returning from service in the Army and Navy, will be presented with honor medals on the Monument grounds.

Magnificent tableaux in front of the Red Cross and Pan-American buildings, on the steps of the Treasury building, in front of the Agricultural grounds, on the Capitol steps and in numerous other locations in the afternoon.

Grand parade starting at 5 o'clock, with ten companies of infantry, fifteen bands, forty-four floats, representing all the countries participating.

Spectacular fireworks display, 9:30 to 11:30 in the evening.

An event which will be historical. Don't miss it!
